KEEPING SENIORS INFORMED

THE ADMIRABLE TRAITS OF OLYMPIANS

Do you have any of the admirable traits of an Olympian? When you watched the various competitions, you had to be impressed by the skills of the athletes. You may have said to yourself "Wow. I could never have done that in my lifetime"! As a senior citizen it is doubtful that you would ever be considering such intense competition. However, you could incorporate some of those admirable traits into your daily activities.

What are some of those traits? A brief list would include: persistence, resilience, inner strength, determination and goal setting. As you think about yourself, can you identify any of those traits as ones which you have? Can you visualize how they could be assets to your every day?

So, who do seniors compete against? Unless you participate in the Senior Games every fall (like, Paul and Sally Buce, Ethel Hutchinson and Dottie Wisniewski) you are most likely to be competing against yourself rather than other people. You set your own goals and strive to accomplish them.

Why would you want to set some goals? It is always favorable to have a goal or goals to make your day more productive. You do not need to have a rigid agenda, but you should have a plan to complete some activities every day. This can give you a sense of accomplishment rather than feel that you have just wasted a day of your life.

A trait to help you accomplish a goal is persistence (meaning - to continue firmly). If you eventually want to walk ten blocks, start with two or three and gradually increase until you reach ten. Then set a new goal. A goal can keep you motivated to do the best that you can in any endeavor.

The trait of resilience is the ability to bounce back. So if one of your knees hurts too much to take a walk be determined to resume walking the next day and reset your goal.

Whenever you ask yourself "can I really do this?" the positive response should be "yes I have the strength to do this." This includes both inner strength and determination and the physical strength to actually do the activities. Physical strength is built by repetition.

Your fingers, hands, arms, legs, etc., will never be stronger if you do not use them repetitively every day. Maintaining physical strength is essential to keeping your independence to have a good quality of life.

Your inner strength is the little engine that says "I think I can" over and over and urges you to stay with your plan. Incorporate some of those admirable traits into your daily life to enable you to enjoy each day now and into the future.

THE THERAPEUTIC SCIENCE OF ADULT COLORING BOOKS: HOW THIS CHILDHOOD PASTIME HELPS ADULTS RELIEVE STRESS

By Dana Dovey

THE HEALING POWER OF ART

Art may not be able to cure disease, but it can surely make coping with it a lot better. Researchers have acknowledged the therapeutic qualities of art for years, and today, art therapy is used to help people express themselves when what they're feeling is too difficult to put into words, such as when they're faced with a cancer diagnosis.

Research shows this form of therapy often has tangible results. One 2006 study, for example, found that mindfulness art therapy for women with cancer helped to significantly decrease symptoms of physical and emotional distress during treatment. Another study from the same year concluded that after only one hour of art therapy, adult cancer patients of all ages "overwhelmingly expressed comfort" and a desire to continue with the therapy.

"People with cancer very often feel like their body has been taken over by the cancer. They feel overwhelmed," Joke Bradt, a music therapist at Drexel University in Philadelphia, told Reuters. "To be able to engage in a creative process... that stands in a very stark contrast to sort of passively submitting oneself to cancer treatments."

It's not just those with cancer that can benefit from the visual arts, either. Art therapy is also helpful among people dealing with a variety of other conditions, such as depression, dementia, anxiety, and PTSD.

Art therapy often involves using an art medium as a tool to help address a patient's specific problem, but as you might have observed in your high school art class, some individuals are more artistically gifted than others. Those who judge themselves as bad artists may be more likely to miss out on the benefits of art-based therapies. Adult coloring, therefore, presents a creative venture without the need for artistic flair. One simply needs to color within the lines in order to get the desired effect. However, some experts suggest it's this lack of artistic input from patients that prevents adult coloring from being considered a genuine form of art therapy.

WHAT'S GOING ON WHEN WE COLOR

Just because adult coloring alone may not constitute art therapy, that doesn't mean the activity isn't helpful. Theresa Citerella, an art therapy student at Lesley University in Cambridge, Mass., told Medical Daily that she has seen more people using the coloring books, both in class and in therapy, to help them focus. "A lot of my fellow graduate classmates bring these coloring books into the classroom setting as a tool to focus more on lectures," Citerella said, explaining that more professors are beginning to welcome this behavior. "For my internship, I find the clients who are fidgeting and cannot sit still ask for coloring the books in order to concentrate on group discussions. We have several adult coloring books at my site to offer the clients."

And considering the inability to focus is often a symptom of anxiety or stress, it only makes sense that adult coloring books would also help with those as well. Dr. Stan Rodski, a neuropsychologist who also happens to be the author of his own line of adult coloring books, says that coloring elicits a relaxing mindset, similar to what you would achieve through meditation. Like meditation, coloring allows us to switch off our brains from other thoughts and focus on the moment. Tasks with predictable results, such as coloring or knitting, can often be calming — Rodski was even able to see the physical effects they had on our bodies by using advanced technology. "The most amazing things occurred — we started seeing changes in heart rate, changes in brainwaves," he told the Australian Broadcasting Corporation, adding that part of this neurological response in "colorists" comes from the repetition and attention to patterns and detail associated with coloring.

Dr. Joel Pearson, a brain scientist at the University of New South Wales in Australia presented a different explanation for the therapeutic effect: Concentrating on coloring an image may facilitate the replacement of negative thoughts and images with pleasant ones.

"You have to look at the shape and size, you have to look at the edges, and you have to pick a color," Pearson told Nine MSN. "It should occupy the same parts of the brain that stops any anxiety-related mental imagery happening as well. ... Anything that helps you control your attention is going to help."

CURRENT EVENTS DISCUSSION GROUP: Mondays at 10:30 AM in the Lounge. Coordinators: Joan Shaw and Paul Buce. The group continues to meet on Monday mornings at 10:30. As usual there are more than enough topics to fill the hour and a half. The group has continued to grow, but there's always enough room for one more.

FINANCIAL / INVESTMENT DISCUSSION GROUP: THURSDAYS AT 10:00 AM. Coordinator: Dick McCann. This is a small intimate group who meet to discuss all levels of experience in making the best choices for your investments. You don't have to be rich, we will discuss any size investment you are thinking of making or have questions on. We offer an open invitation to all regarding subjects you would like to discuss and any questions you may have. Again, all are welcome!

FRIDAY FLICKS: Friday November 18. (Pizza at 11:15 AM, Movie at 12:00 PM) Coordinator: Don McCree. Pizza: $3.00. Movie: Free. Showing "HELLO MY NAME IS DORIS" starring Sally Field, Max Greenfield, Beth Behrs, Wendi McLendon-Covey, Stephen Root, Elizabeth Reaser, Natasha Lyonne and Tyne Daly. Doris Miller is a shy, eccentric 60-something woman, living alone following the death of her mother, whom she has lived with for her whole life. At the funeral, her brother Todd and his wife try to persuade her to sell the house, especially the possessions, as she is a hoarder and has a habit of keeping discarded furniture she finds on the street. Her only close friend is the fiery Roz, though she gets along with her granddaughter. On her way to work, where she has been working as a data entry worker for decades, she meets a younger co-worker John who she is immediately infatuated with. Empowered and inspired by cliched self-improvement tapes, Doris decides to go after him.

GARDEN CLUB: Meets the Second and Fourth Wednesday at 1:00 PM. Coordinator: Paul Buce. The club will meet only once this month, that will be on the second Wednesday, November 9, at 1:00 pm. Weather will pretty much have wound up our outdoor work, but we'll pick a subject and roll on.
